Le it govern

There is a growing tendency on the past of many people to let some one size fate their burdens. More and more man least upon Government to solve their profileme and provide their security, as we, the people, put our faith in the power of an emaipstent state.

Security is not the product of any political power. Government wields no magic wand, invoce no decrees, makes no largewhich can provide the things people need and want. These, only the people, thouselves, can

The only would which enables us to est and drink, clothes or shelters us, and educates our children, that provides a measure of security for our families or for old age, is exceeded by the shills and services of men in industry or on our farms.

The secondile for higher wages, higher profits, more binners, bigger possions and form subsidies, is altimately of no avail, unless the people increase production and communities.

In the face of further threats of inflation, the wageprice ratence, the increasing burden of taxes and the ng complacency, those who expect our next to watch over us some day have a big jdt

You can just but your bottom dime that if anything is done by anyone to connect any of the conditions had threaten our accounty or undermine our proposity it will be done by individuals. Alive to the dangers, and proling their influence and strength, they need told only as much inflation as they want and resting together, they can domand lower taxes and economy in Government whenever they make up their minds to do something about it with the courage to act.

This is a Do-It-Yourself country and we, the people, con change things whenever we domand it. We can own make encoled things straight. The notion was built by Bo-Ri-Yourself men and women. He prosperity and nountity were the finaltion of the people's industrial and againstituted officets, their courage, character, fragality, spirit of venture and self-reliance. We will know that we get out of a thing only what we put in it, and that if you get anywhere you will have to do it.
